DEBATE

On the bill from the Senate for making appropriation for building an additional number of gun boats, for the protection of our ports and harbors.

CONTINUED. [Mr. Elliot's Speech continued] The president says, " Under present circumstances, and governed by the intentions of the legislature, as manifested by their annual appropriations of money for the purposes of defence, it has been concluded to combine, 1 Land batteries, fur. nished with heavy cannon and mortars, and established on all the points around the place favorable for preventing vessels from lying before it -2d, moveable artillery, which may be carried, as occasion may require, to points unprovided with fixed batteries - 30, floating batteries; and 4. Gun-boats, which may oppose an enemy at his entrance, and co-operate with the bat teries for his expulsion ". We have then the opinions in favor of gun-boats, of gen. Gates and gep. Wilkinson; men of very dissimilar character, and I trust, of une qual fame, but whose knowledge of this particular mode of defence may possibly have been perfectly upon a level. The message proceeds, " The effect of guo boats for the defence of harbors, and other amouth and inclosed waters, may be eati.

mated in part from that of gallies, formerly much used, but less powerful, more costly in construction and maintenance, and requiriog more men." Here it is proper to remark, that as, by an unfortunate coincidence of circumstances, an adventurer of the name of Americus has robbed Colum. bus of the glory of giving name to the new world, so, by a like unlucky concurrence of events, gan-boats have usurped the honors due to gallies. " But the gan boat itself is believed to be in use with every modern maritime nation for the purpose of defence. Algiere, &c." That the gen boet is in use in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, there can be no doubt; but the question is, of a what use is it? What effect does it produce? This we are yet to learn. " The effect of gun bosts at present in he neighborhood of G.braltar, is well kcown, and how much they were used. during a former war. Every man, it is true, who seeks for military or paval information, has read the account of the siege of Gibraltar, crude and inelegant as it is.

I have read it repeatedly. But I do not there discover that gun boats, alone and unconnected with other means of "attack and defence," were ever found to produce any important effects. " Be the northern powers of Europe, whose seas are particularly adapted to them, they are still more used." This is certainly correct information. A late writer informs us that the gun boat, properly so called, and which is a very different wessel from a gal.

ley, was first used with effect, in the naval wars between Russia and Sweden, in the Baltic, where no tides interfere with their manœuvres, and where few winds or cur rents obstruct their operations; and sug gests that the use made of them in those wars, first led France to use them against England. We are next presented with the evidence which is to prove conclusively that a flotilla of gun boats can defear and destroy a pavy of ships of the line. The remarkable action between the Russian flotilla of gun boats and gellies, and a

Turkish fleet of ships of the line and fri gates, in the Liman Sea, in 1788, will be readily recollected, the latter commanded by their most celebrated admiral, were completely defeated and several of their scene of action. This and several other actions which took place between the Turks drink with the minister; but then, we ne- must adhere to my old opinion, that the and Russians in that quarter are called, by these writers, amphibious engagements, scarcely to be considered as possessing a naval character. It appears that the Russian flouilla occupied the shoals near Kinburn or Kilburn, (for the place is called by different names by different writers) and was covered by the camen of that fortress; cratic members are invited to Mr. Er. and it did not consist entirely, nor indeed skine's, they not only go, but take-great to any great extent, of gun boats, but was delight in going. I could not have believ. the gentlemen of the Finnegin Mess a composed of frigates, brigg and gallies, with some boats; that the Turks, finding themselves unable to approach the Russians with their ships, so as to be able to cannonade them with effect, set themselves to work to form a light armament, similar to that of the Russians, that they might meet them on equal ground; and they did form such an armament, more numerous than the Russians, but far inferior in construction, equipment and seamen. Yet the Turks are said to have lost the victory in consequencejof their ignorance of a river which had been in the possession of their empire for ages. They did not attack with ships of the line and frigates, but with frigates, gallies, and boats belonging to the ships of war. The Turkish vessels before their fire could produce any effect, began to strick in the sand; the grand admirai's or Sloan, or some other good republican, frighte, not " ship of the line," stuck fast; in this situation five vessels were burnt and two taken, and the remainder of the scattered flotills fled for shelter; and whi. ther did they flee for shelter? To the ships of the line! Instead of the ships be. ing destroyed, they remained firm at their post, and when the remaining vessels of the florilla reached them, they were out of danger ! Thus it appears that no such battle at described in the message of the tenth of February ever happened. We have yet o see, if indeed the world ever can see, a naval action between a florilla of gun boats and gellies and a fire of ships of the line and frigates, in which victory shall declare for the former. For wo florillas, or feets of similar structure and equipment to en gage, and for one of them, assisted by the cannon of a powerful fortress, to defeat the other, and capsure and desirny that portion of it which is actually stranded, is certainly a very different thing from what a would be for - Routh of sun hoste to der and desiron a fleet of ships of the line,

From the United States Gazeite.

Extract of a letter from a venerable democrat dated Washington, December 28th 1807.

"You have, no doubt, seen in the Aurora, an account of a dinner given by a mess of federal gentlemen, to Mr. Erskine, the British minister. Being afraid, how, after turning traitor to his king, can lest evil communications should corrupt good manners, I have been little in the habit of speaking to federalis supon any sub. jeet. But, having some slight acquaint. ance with Mr. Bayard, who in the above account is seated to have been of the party, I ventured one day to call upon him for the purpose of rebuking him severely; but to my surprise, tearned that he had not yet arrived at the sear of government, having | Not only the democratic members of conbeen detained at home by professional business, ever since the commencement of the session. I began, therefore, to doubt, whether this was not one of old Duane's own plumpers. But it was suggested to tish ministers house and with their ladies me that the paper had passed into his son's to; and Wr Erskine and his lady and sehand-a hopeful sprig-a chip of the old cretary are invited to their houses. - And I block, I am told; a routh worthy of his sire. Finding myself thus brought up at the outset, I telt no disposition to pursue the inquiry, and should probably have dis- had so much as a pigeon shot fired at her. believed the whole story, if, fortunately, I am wrong in saying the heads of departmy curiosity as well as anxiety had not ments; only Mr. Madison and Mr. Smith been excited by a subsequent occurrence. Calling one evening on a democratic friend of mine, a member of the house of representarives, for the purpose of talking over I have not done; even Mr. Jefferson has the atrocities of the British government, often & again, since the attack on the Cheand the wickedness of ail its subordinate sapeake invited Mr. Erskine to dine with agents, I was struck with astonishment & him! You will not wonder that I am hortor at histapp logizing for leaving me a. bruntly, for the purpose of completing with an invitation he had received to a party (a bail and supper) at the British minister's! they say, whatever disputes there may be I could not for the soul of me avoid exposrelating with him on the fl-gittousness of thing to do with the private intercourse besuch conduct. I informed him of the sea sation which the Pinnegan mess had excit. Finnegan Mess, say, that after obliging ed by their open and profligate politeness. Mr. Erekine to drink our president, it was to the British minister - and the? I doubt no more than fair for them to drink hisking. ed, I told him, the truth of the story- I could wish to believe that the Figuregan there my friend interrupted me, by saving, Mess, and the democratick members, and by whom? Undoubtedly by common rea, that without question, some part of the the heads of departments I have mentionders who have access only to common in- store was true; that the British minister, ed, and the President mean no harm by information from a writer who appears to ner. " But there," said he, "there is the good breeding if nothing more than it have been personally acquainted with the difference between us, and these federal has been intended why there is not to genilemen. We, to be sure go and est and sure so much harm in it. Still however ver ask him to come and eat and drink matters will never be properly conducts with us. D'ye take! Economy, you old quiz, economy !" And away my gentle- Vice President, Buncan M' Ferland ted man tripped with as much unconcern as if of the Treasury, and Willis Alston, see he was about to engage in one of the most of war ! And every federal member common place things in the world?

Upon inquiry, I find that when demo. shall act a dignified part-never am at ed this, if I had not got it from the most treated with as much attention and resal ur questionable authority. It can my dear as ever. sir, be abundantly proved. However, they are not so deeply sunk in guilt as the Fro. negan mess; for they democrats only get dinners, they do not give any. I can de. vise no apology for the conduct of the F. mess. If they were mean enough to give Mr. Ersking a dinner, they might surely have avoided giving a toast to please him. It was honor, and ought to have been pleasure enough for him, to dine by invitation at the same table with the American repre sentatives. He should have been content to have got his belly full of good eating, and if the mess would have toasted any body, after Mr. Jefferson (whom they gave as the first toast) they might have given Bousparte, or Turreau, or Crowninsh eld, tion, which was to have been published a

What particularly puzzles me, is not so much that these federalists should give Mr. lefferson, but that the British minister should take him down, with as little op pugnation, as if it was all right and pro per. But I'll be bound he wan't hear the last of it, when he gets home. If Mr. Canning does not pull his ears for him, I am no prophet, depend upon that. For you perceive, at once, if it be so execrable in our opinion, for our members of congress to drink the king's health; if the kind and gentle hearted, and I may truly say, lamb-like democra:s of this country, have been would up to such an agony of bursting exasperation, by the conduct of the American representatives, how think you, the rough old tyrant of Britain will be able to endure the tale of his minister's having drank the heal h of what he will cal a rebel president? What will the haughty and implacable John Bull say, when they learn, that at the moment they are bent on roining and des roying America, their mi done so, is evident to the meanest capacity. Why else should be drink the president's heal h? It is very unaccountable, all tais, surely. The federalists have gone over to the British side, and the British minister has come over to our side! For candor must compel us to admir, that if Dusne's rule be a good one, it should work both ways. I would not be in Ersking's shoes for ever so much, even if he should have the luck to get safely home. But he expect that? For treason is treason: as a crime equally execrable against what ever country it may be committed. If the Finnegan House blew down for the punish ment of federalists, Mr. Erskibe cappor. I should think, in the natural course of events, escape shipwreck. British influence, I am morified to tell you, is very much on the increase here,gress accept as many invitations as they can get from the British minister : not only he feder list return his invitations but even the heads of departments go ro the Bri am credibly informed that on those occasi ons, they est and drink and talk and laugh together, as if the Chesapeake had never give into these enormities. The others do not invite Mr. Erskine et ail. Because understand they give no dinners at all. But greived and alarmed at these things. Those who thus fondle and nestle with the British minister effect indeed to justify it, because between the two governments, that has no tween gendemen. And those justify the

They are silent on the aud ject of the expected blockading proclams the 14th, and supply us with only the fi lowing articles.

We vesterday announced the departur of sir Sydney Smith's squadron from Plan mouth, consisting of 5 sail of the line. will touch at Cork, were it expects to feet the Hiberoia of 120 gous, which sailed from Plymouth on Saturday. On its m rical at Cork, sir Sydney will transfer his flag from the London to the Hibernian. ] is impossible yet to form any idea of the magnitude of the expedition. The part part will sail as we have already stated in a separate division, and will as in the cast of the Copenhagen expedition precede the military. Among the troops to be employ ed in this expedition is the 11th regimen now embarking at Plymouth The equi dron in which it is to sail will touch Cork, and take on board the 3d and25h who are waiting there for transports.

Letters from Sicily and Malta of theday of the 23d Sept men ion that the Britis army of Alexandria had embarked, and were hourly expected at Messina to reinform the army of Sicily. The 10th regiment had also arrived at Gibraltar.

Mr Sylvester a messenger, was sent of from the foreign office as a late hour of Thursday night, with dispatches, His destination was kept a protound secretand it was not known to himself till just before he left the office.

Some disparches of a singular and high ly important nature were lately found of board the American ship Catoline, detain ed and brought into Piymouth by an Esp lish privateer. The Caroline was bound from New York to Cherburg, and the dir patches were from the French minister in the U. S to Talleyrand. They are in possession of government, and are said have communicated some circumstancesol high importance.

Several objects of enterprize have been presented to administration, the occupation of Candia in the Mediterrapean and of Madeira and the Brazils. The French, it appears, have assumed the complete dominion of the Elbe. A letter of they first mentions, that they had taken pessession of the guard ship at Cur. haven: that the suffered no vessel to pass without the strictest search; and that, " there was the least reason to suspect she either came from an English port, or had British property on board, she was delain ed, and, in most cases, condemned. To give a greater effect to these measures, the French were about to remove the armed ship usually stationed at Twierenfleth 10 Cuxhaven. Even the Blankanese fisher men, who, with considerable difficulty has permission to fish for a stipulated time ou the coast, had orders lately issued to them to give the speediest information of every vessel they fell in with, and were prohibit ed from having any communication with the English, under pain of military pl nishment. Every precaution was taked at the same time, to prevent any jutel' course with Heligo island.

The French and Danes, it would seem were not quite agreed about the limits of their respective dominions on the Elber The naval power in that river being all of the side of the latter, they of course cap tured whatever came within their reachi an advantage of which their allies w rather jealous. A number of Danish seamen have voluntarily assembled at Gluckstadt, but with what intention was not known.

It is with great grief that we announce the damage done by the late tempest. On two hundred troops, besides women, was driven on shore near Catwyck, but they were all saved by assistance afforded them from the shore. The Augustus Casar, a very fine transport with 500 troops on board is said to have been lost, and only 130 saved by the boats of our men of war. When she was last seen, she was drifting to the Flemish coast with only her foremast standing. It is possible that she may have outlived the storm, and got ashore on the Flemish coast. Another transport is stated in our Deal letter to have sunk and all perishen. There is a rumor of one of the Danish prizes, a 64, having gone down, but we hope we shall hear that it originated in the circumstance of the Faun, or, as some accourts say, the Waldedemre man of war, having driven from her anchors in Yarmouth roads, and been obliged to cut her masts. She rode out the gale however, and is now in safety. -But the master of the Argo transport reports, that as he was at anchor during the heavy gale on the night of the 10 h inst. pear a sand bank in the North Channel, a large ship then struck on the sand which he took to be one of the Danish as's, with troops on board, and he much fears that that the vessel went to pieces, as in the morning he saw casks and pieces of wreck fl. ating about.

NORFOLK, January 1.

It was not our intention to have noticed a circumstance of some embarrassment in regard to Mr. Rose, the British envoy, bu as we find impressions have been made, which in the present moment-excite unne cessary alarm, we deem it our duty to state what has occurred, as far as we are inform.

On the arrival of the Statira, the British consul addressed letters to the collector of this port, the naval and civil authorities, informing them of the arrival of this ship, and that Mr. Rose, the envoy extraordinary from Great Britain was on board, de. siring to know if this ship would be received in the U. S. with the same hospita hity, that the skips of any other nation in amily with the U. S. would be received. Our readers will recollect that although the act of congress and the president's proclamation contain provisions in favor of British ships of war coming with dispatchsubjected to some other regulations as to supplies, stay and intercourse. On these latter points explanation, we presume, was it is, answered that every attention in his power, consistent with his duty, should be shewed to this ship, at the same time that he was not authorised to make any excep. tions to the Statira particularly. MiRose has been we believe perfectly satisfied with the politeness of the collector and the other gentleman applied to, at the same time for reasons that we are not acquaint. ed with, has thought proper to remain on board until advices are received from Washington. This affair which has an unpleasant aspect, will be attended with no o. ther public inconvenience than what may Juncture. It is presumed thatevery difficulty necessary orders are lodged.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 8.

As we are not permitted now adays to know what our government are doing with us, or what are their reasons for adopting measures which are likely to prove very distressing to the country, we must be al. lowed to guess.

A few days since we published a letter from a member of congress to his friend in the country, in which, speaking of the embargo, he says:

"The measure is adopted in pursuance of a recommendation from the president, professedly given in consequence of recent communications from Mr. Armstrong, our minister at Paris. Mr. A. has given information that Bonaparte is determined to inforce his decree against neutral commerce, without any exception to our favor. The letter of Armstrong however, was not communicated to us, though different gen. tlemen expressed a strong jealousy, that there was something in that letter besides notice of Bonaparte's determination to in. force his decree.

Now, it is very evident that the letters of Messrs, Armstrong and Champagoy, mentioned in the president's message were before the house; because an order was made and entered upon the journal to return them to the president in compliance with his request. Yet that there were Persia is to be aided by the supply of 50,000 some important communications from Mr. Armstrong, concerning the demands of France, which were not laid before confrom believing that the attention of our ad- gress, is manifest from the following reso. lution, which was offered by Mr. Gardinier, and which the house, without debate, refused even to take into consideration. Nay they went further in their attempts to mention the resolution; they omitted to is supperfed, by a motion made for that purpose on Monday last, to insert it.

> Mr Gardenier's resolution. Resolved. That the president of the U S. be requested to lay before this house, copies of all such communications, letters and papers, as may have been received from the American minister at Paris, relative to the imperial decree of the 21st No. vember, 1806; and particularly such com. munications or letters as he may have re. ceived from our said minister, at the time of receiving the papers which were laid before this house on Friday last.

It would seem from this that the president did not communicate the letters of the American minister at Paris, relative to the imperial decree, and that there were other communications for letters received from our minister at the time of receiving the papers laid before the house. If these com munications of letters related merely to Bonaparte's contruction of the decree, there could bably prive for withholding them; since .... tetter of the grand judge, es, in distress, &c. they are nevertheless Regnier, which was communicated and published, fully established that point.

Taking all these things together, cannot but guess that the'e is something required. The collector, whose province very important as well as very dark and mysterious still behind the cultain. Why the people, at such a time as this, are not permitted to know it, we cannot conjec-

Scarcely a day passes, of late, but we meet with some person who has come to town, from the country, for the purpose of disposing of his flux-seed, his flour, his pork, his corn, or some other production of his labor and industry. Here, unfortunately, our power of On Wednesday last a British ship of war satisfying their curiosity ceases. ty intelligent and independent men in the house of representatives: and we know that a continuance will be almost ruinous to the most industrious and laborious classes of our citizens. But what great national advantage is to be attained by it, to counterbalance such enormous sacrifices? Alas! We know nor. It gives us great pleasure, at this period of gloomy anticipation, to perceive that the substantial hus. bandmen of the country, without distinction of political parties, appear to feel like independent Americans, and manifest a disposition to maintain their independence at any expence or hazard, which may be necessary for securing the object. But they consider themselves as werthy of being intrusted with the actual state of public affairs. They say that if the country is re. ally in such danger as to require the people to sumbit to burthers, to the amount imposed upon them by the embargo, they are ready to submit, not only with patience but with alacrity. Still they , say, that a brave and public spirited people are worthy of being confided in; that they should be allowed to look the danger in the face, and not merely be told that it exists, without being permitted to know in what quarter, or to what extent.
